

Jal Pakhwada, held annually from April 16 to 30, is a nationwide 15-day campaign in India aimed at water conservation and awareness, particularly within schools. Aligned with the Jal Shakti Abhiyan, it aims to foster a, “water-saving mindset” among students through pledges, competitions, and community outreach, transforming them into "Jal Rakshaks".

Under this our students took a pledge to save water, made posters and with enthusiasm participated in school activities to save water.

Even little ones recited poems and community and council members of students created awareness among students to save water for future.
